

The Importance of Experiences in Infancy for Later Learning

Perfect Analogy, Amanda Bryans!!!
Good prenatal thought
Responsive and reciprocal relationships are so important!
I've never met a parent that doesn't want the best for their child. Something that is so important to hold in mind.
I heard this story. It was supposed to be about Jim Thorpe.
Does anyone know if this is going to be taped for viewing later?
the neurons that he was talking about that get pruned out during the pruning stage Beautiful use of visuals - analogies!
so true about transitions and the importance of having them for children. Well Said
ROSS IS AMAZING. Everyone - teachers and parents - need to hear this talk!
I think warnings are SO IMPORTANT!
Yes, concrete specific references to what "external" supports caregivers can use to support self regulation would be helpful to many.
I am going to more supported of self regulation...it is not about me but the child in my care. Now, I understand about separation anxiety better. Each child in his/her own timing.
define cognitive skills please
I always hear from co-workers that when children know man
I also liked the study on seeing how children make predictions of the world around them by what they observe
