Teacher: Ok, now let's play the game.

Narrator: We're Project Head Start -- the preschool child development program and we need adult volunteers. Since 1965, Head Start has helped more than seven million children, with activities that have made a tremendous difference in their lives.

Narrator: But we can't do it alone.

Only eight cents of every Head Start dollar comes from the Federal Government. The rest comes from local community contributions -- contributions from your friends and neighbors, through their time and resources. If you have the time to serve as a classroom or program aide, or if you have a service you can contribute, we have the place.

Teacher: It's how I can tell what your blood pressure is. You, too, can make a difference in a child's life. Find out how you can help.
