

Barbara Dowling: Some of the fundamental science process skills present as early as infancy include: using the senses to learn; observing; classifying; investigating; and predicting. Each of these science skills are reflected in the Head Start Child Outcomes Framework.

-- End of Video --